

STRESS RELIEF

ISE 2019 will see designflow expand its umbrella of services to include; outsourced design for commercial projects, AV/smart building consultancy and improvements to its proposals & documentation for residential integrators. All of which have been created to provide stress relief to the pressure associated with modern integration projects.

designflow's new outsourced design for commercial projects has been specially tailored to suit integrators working in the commercial sector with flexible per page, per project or per day pricing. This means designflow can now act as an outsourced extension to an in-house commercial design team, with none of the headaches associated with outsourcing.

2019 marks the official launch of designflow's AV/smart building consultancy service aimed at integrators, architects, mechanical engineers and interior designers. This service will act as a specification tool for projects where a tender process is employed. With designflow designing and specifying the equipment and creating all the documentation required to put a projects AV/smart building content out to tender. The documents are presented in a unique format designed to encourage like for like bids and simplify the tender process for all involved.

Back for 2019 is the companies popular 'Free if you win' proposal offer along with a selection of sample proposals and a new take on presenting proposals. This all forms part of designflow's outsourced design service aimed at residential integrators to help them save precious time creating their own proposals and documentation in house.

At its hall 1 Custom Home Europe stand, designflow will demonstrate of all of these exciting new services throughout the 4 day show. The best time to visit is in the afternoon on day 2 as there will be a cocktail party starting at 4:30pm and there will be a special event taking place during this.

Exclusive during ISE designflow is offering to match any deposit placed against any of its outsourced design services*. This means that designflow will contribute the same value as any company placing a deposit for design with them during the show. The best news is, this offer applies to both new and existing customers!

*Excludes per day pricing
